

I'd like to encourage you to eliminate the current and harmful UNE-P legislation in favor of a new paradigm that would clearly encourage sustainable competition and facilities investment.

It is time for the FCC to dismantle the economically irrational facilities rules that have devastated the telecom industry.

The FCC should create a national framework governing the telecom industry that incents facilities investment and provides for long-term sustainable competition.

Furthermore the FCC should not extend the unbundling requirements to broadband facilities.